Dr. Stephen J. Bagnato, a Developmental School Psychologist and Professor of Pediatrics and Psychology at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, is Faculty Director of Developmental Psychology Interdisciplinary Training at the UCLID Center at the University of Pittsburgh, a Maternal and Child Health Bureau leadership education institute in neurodevelopmental disabilities. He is Director of Early Childhood Partnerships (ECP) at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, an innovative university-hospital-community consultation and research collaborative which promotes the use of "best practices" and advancements in the evidence-base in early childhood intervention. Within ECP, Dr. Bagnato directs the Pennsylvania satellite of the TRACE Center for Excellence in Early Childhood Assessment, a five-year OSEP-funded initiative to research and establish the evidence-base for promising early childhood assessment practices. In over 30 years of research, Dr. Bagnato has specialized in authentic curriculum-based assessment and program evaluation research strategies for young children at developmental risk and with neurodevelopmental disabilities. Dr. Bagnato has authored over 120 research and applied publications in the fields of early intervention, early childhood education, school psychology, developmental disabilities, and developmental neuropsychology. He has been the recipient of numerous professional research awards by the National Brain Injury Research Association, the American Psychological Association—Division 16, and was the 2001 recipient of the University of Pittsburgh Chancellor's Distinguished Public Service Award for his activities in ECP. His latest publications include the third edition of the widely used resource text, LINKING Assessment and Early Intervention: An Authentic Curriculum-based Approach (2000; Brookes), and The Temperament and Atypical Behavior Scale: Early Childhood Indicators of Developmental Dysfunction (2000; Brookes).

Cyndi Pitonyak is a special educator who is particularly interested in working with teams of teachers and parents to support students with complex needs and/or problem behaviors in general education settings. She is the developer of the Supports with Imagination and Meaning (S.W.I.M.) project for Montgomery County Public Schools in southwest Virginia. Cyndi was a primary change agent in Montgomery County's move to inclusive special education services for all students in their neighborhood schools, which has been highly successful for over 15 years. In addition to her work in Montgomery County, Cyndi teaches at Radford University and consults with school divisions nationally and internationally.

Dr. Kristie Pretti-Frontzcak is an Associate Professor in early childhood intervention in the Department of Educational Foundations and Special Services at Kent State University (KSU). Dr. Pretti-Frontzcak received her doctorate in early intervention from the University of Oregon and has extensive experience in preparing preservice and inservice personnel in recommended practices for working with young children and their families. She directs the Early Childhood Intervention Specialist Program at KSU, where she is responsible for preparing preservice teachers to work with children with disabilities from birth to age eight. Dr. Pretti-Frontzcak frequently provides training and technical assistance to programs interested in the Assessment, Evaluation and Programming System (AEPS), Activity-Based Intervention (ABI), and creating legally defensible and meaningful individualized education programs (IEPs). Her research centers on using authentic assessment practices for accountability and programming (specifically on the utility of the AEPS), effective approaches to working with young children in inclusive settings (specifically regarding the efficacy of an activity-based approach and the application of universal design for learning principles), and the link between assessment, individualized goals, and quality curriculum.
